Introduction

Design variables provide a method for specifying critical parameters just before a simulation. This allows you to make quick changes to parameter values across single or multiple critical components without having to edit any software statements. Design variables can also be used in simple parametric analysis, which can change a design variable across a range of values and display multiple simulation results on a single plot.

Using Design Variables

This part of the tutorial will show you how to parametricize the width of the NACA0012 and PDA012 members of an airfoil by using design variables. These variable values are then set using the Running Through Environment panel in simulation.

1. Make a copy of the geometry with dimensions you have previously designed, or create a new one.
2. Open the dimensions of the model.
3. Edit each one of the NACA0012 dimensions as desired, and name the parameter by either clicking on it and entering Parameter, or you can press "q" as a shortcut.
4. Define the rest of the width from $200 - \text{par}$ to $200 + \text{par}$. This specifies that a variable called par will be used to set the width of the NACA0012. When you do this, observe that values for "Dimensional Difference Keys" change from a constant value to a formula that involves the variable par . Always check to make sure that formula is updated when you change the width to a variable otherwise, your simulation results will be incorrect. Click OK to apply the change.
5. Repeat this procedure to change the width of the PDA012 to par .
6. Select Check \rightarrow Check and name. Verify that there are no errors.
7. Launch the Analysis Running Through Environment.
8. Set up the simulation environment as you normally would for simulating a schematic. This includes specifying a simulation file and transient run length, making the ANSYS mesh reader in the environment options, and selecting the compute to be plotted on the schematic.
9. In ANSYS, select Variables \rightarrow Copy User-defined. The design variables par and par should appear in the Design Variables area of the Running Environment window.
10. In ANSYS, select Variables \rightarrow Set. In the table that appears, type 1 in the id and then apply the value by clicking Apply. Change the value of par to 0.01 and click Apply. Check the values have been assigned, click OK. See Figure 1 and 2 below.
11. In ANSYS, use the connection by selecting Simulation \rightarrow Variable and Run. After loading the file instructions to complete, the variable values will go up. The results should be
