protection of Indonesia's species rich and vulnerable tropical forests threatened through high deforestation rates. The local people's perceptions about their environment and land uses were assessed using participatory survey techniques: focus group discussions, scoring exercises, free lists of species, and participatory mapping. To further record the traditional practices, a survey was conducted on medicinal plants. The ecological assessment was done through survey plots in different land use units where tree diversity and diameter at breast height was measured. The inhabitants of Nanga Dua are dependent upon forest products for food material for construction, basketry, etc. Medicinal plants are an integral part of the health care system. The traditional shifting cultivation creates a diverse and mosaic-like patchwork of various types of forests having different successional stages. Tree diversity in the land use units was generally high with the primary forest in immediate proximity acting as a tree species reservoir.

Cloud of Cards Patrick Keller, 2018-09-25. Cloud of Cards: a home cloud kit to reappropriate your data. Self is the final outcome of Inhabiting and Interfacing the Clouds, a joint design and ethnographic research project investigating personal clouds and data centers. The main results of this design research project have been informed by the preliminary findings of an ethnographic research into the cloud. Cloud of Practices and a design sketches phase conducted in parallel. They comprise four digital and physical artefacts forming a set of modular tools: cards which are delivered in the form of an open source DIY kit, freely accessible at www.cloudofcards.org and on Github. The purpose of these tools is to enable everyone, in particular the community of designers and makers, to set up their own small scale data center and cloud manage their data in a decentralized way and develop their own alternative projects using this small scale personal infrastructure.

Integrated Dental Treatment Planning Elizabeth J. Kay,2005 Dentistry is not only about understanding the causes of oral disease and having the technical expertise to treat them Patients frequently challenge practitioners with ethical dilemmas psychological and social problems health and welfare difficulties and personal demands This book covers the case histories of six individuals and the dental problems they encounter through their lives Each case is loosely based on a real individual to allow the senior dentistry student to develop an understanding of the many issues they may face in daily clinical practice Although all the patients featured in the book have problems related to oral and dental diseases their successful long term management requires both a profound awareness of modern treatment options and a broad knowledge of law applied to dentistry the ethics of dental care plus the psychology and sociology of disease and health related behaviour Each chapter describes a hypothetical patient and how he or she presented or might present to a general dental practitioner The various treatment options which could be chosen by the patient s practitioner are included and the advantages and disadvantages of the various treatment plans are described The medium and long term outcomes for that patient in terms of their oral well being are then covered so that the reader can appreciate how even seemingly inconsequential treatment decisions can impact on a person many years after their encounter with the dentist This longitudinal approach will help the reader to view dealing with patients problems as a lifetime s work rather than as a set of one off interventions
