Building a Validity Argument for a Listening Test of Academic Proficiency Vahid Aryadoust,2013-07-26 Over the years various approaches to validation have emerged in psychological and educational assessment research which can be classified into traditional approaches and modern approaches Traditional approaches view validity as a multicomponential concept including for example content construct and predictive validity while modern approaches conceptualize it as a unitary concept evaluated through argumentation Drawing on the modern approach this book builds a validity argument for an International English Language Testing System IELTS listening test sample The book provides some insights into the listening sub skills that the test engages the psychometric dimensionality of the test variables that predict item difficulty parameters bias across age nationality test experience and gender as well as predictive referenced evidence of validity A variety of techniques including the Rasch model and structural equation modelling are used to answer the research questions and to build a validity argument framework this argument organizes the thematically related findings into a coherent treatment of the validity of the listening test The book presents the first treatment of validity argument and related analytical tools in one volume and maps the psychometric statistical analysis tools onto the validity argument framework It also provides an extensive literature review of listening comprehension validation and psychometric modeling and proposes both methods for developing and validating self assessment instruments and novel approaches to improving the quality of language assessments

Assessing Languages for Specific Purposes Dan Douglas, 2000 This book is the first to examine implementation of tests for specific purposes

Native Speakers and Native Users Alan Davies, 2013-08-01 Native speakers and native users are terms traditionally used to differentiate between speakers who have acquired a language from birth and speakers who have learnt a second language This book highlights the problems associated with making such a clear cut distinction By analysing a range of literature language uses and proficiency tests Davies argues that there is no significant difference between native speakers and native users and emphasises the importance of the Standard Language Whilst individual native speakers may vary considerably the academic construct of the native speaker is isomorphic with the Standard Language which is available to both native speakers and native users through education In this book Davies explores the native user as a second language speaker who uses language with native speaker competence This book will be of significant interest to students and researchers working in the fields of second language acquisition and applied linguistics Manorama Year Book ,1999

The Use and Abuse of EFL Dictionaries Hilary Nesi,2000 The book begins with a review of research into dictionary use A number of experimental design problems are discussed in particular the unreliability of questionnaire responses and the need for detailed accounts of individual dictionary consultations whilst sampling in numbers sufficient to represent specified populations The experiments reported in subsequent chapters investigate issues raised in the review The first two studies find that dictionary use during a reading comprehension test affected completion speed but not test scores The apparent failure of dictionary use to improve comprehension is attributed to the test itself the dictionaries and the users choice of look up words The ability of users to interpret dictionary entries is investigated in three further studies which use computers to gather data on large numbers of individual consultations The findings indicate that there is little difference between three major EFL dictionaries in terms of speed of consultation and overall productive success They also indicate that Malaysian ESL subjects who have higher vocabulary scores are slower in their reading and less successful in their interpretation of entries than Portuguese EFL subjects Finally the findings suggest that overall productive success is unaffected by the presence or absence of examples The experimental findings lead to the conclusion that dictionary consultation is a process in which users match pre existing beliefs about word meaning and behaviour against segments in the dictionary entry Such segments are often selected because they are familiar sounding and conceptually accessible but may contain only incomplete or non essential information Where pre existing beliefs and dictionary information conflict dictionary information is sometimes overridden Thus word knowledge acquired from a single consultation is often insufficient to ensure productive success Although it is probably inevitable that word knowledge will be acquired slowly through multiple encounters modifications to the dictionary entry and the training of users might help to avoid serious misinterpretation of dictionary information Parliamentary Debates (Hansard).
