

What is the climate of Singapore?

Throughout the year, Singapore experiences a tropical equatorial climate. This climate is defined as continuous high temperatures and precipitation. Singapore's daily temperature ranges from 23°C to 33°C, with the lowest being 23°C, and the highest being 33°C. Rain and hail are the only forms of precipitation in Singapore. Singapore experiences the highest rainfall during the Northeast Monsoon between November to early March, and the lowest rainfall during the Southwest Monsoon between June and September.

What are the ecosystems in Singapore?

It Singapore has a multitude of ecosystems that are categorised into land-based and coastal ecosystems.

Land-based Ecosystems

Largely preserved in its four nature reserves, namely, Bukit Timah Nature Reserve, Central Catchment Nature Reserve, Sungei Buloh Wetland Reserve, and Labrador Nature Reserve. These are legally protected under the Parks and Trees Act. The most dominant ecosystem is the tropical rainforest.

- In tropical rainforests, such as the Singapore Botanic Gardens, there is high structural and species diversity, and common vegetation such as Fern, Dipterocarps, Bamboo, Fig trees, and more. The ground beneath is also extensively covered and shaded by the tree canopy also known as canopy cover.

Coastal Ecosystems

Consists of intertidal areas, mangroves, and coral reefs.

- Intertidal areas: Intertidal areas in Singapore are coastal zones that lie between the high tide and low tide marks, exposed to the air during low tide and submerged underwater during high tide. In Singapore this exposure occurs twice a day due to semi-diurnal tides. These areas include sandy shores, rocky shores and seagrass beds.
- For example, Coastal ecosystems such as those at East Coast Park and Changi Beach feature sandy shores that support various species of crabs, mollusks, and migratory birds.
- Mangroves: They are made up of salt-tolerant trees and shrubs that are highly adapted to the harsh conditions of fluctuating tides, high salinity, and saturated soils. They provide shelter and food for marine life and protect coastlines from harsh storms.
- For example, Pasir Ris Park, situated in the eastern part of Singapore, includes a mangrove boardwalk and Sungei Buloh Wetland Reserve which houses the most significant and well-preserved mangrove areas.
- Coral Reefs: Mainly found in the Southern Islands of Singapore, including Sisters' Islands Marine Park, and hosts a wide range of marine species, such as corals, fish, and other invertebrates.
