On Being and Having a Case Manager Jeffrey

Lee Longhofer, Paul M. Kubek, Jerry Floersch, 2010 On Being and Having a Case Manager stresses the importance of the process of building relationships in helping clients realize independent lives. Based on a two-year study of Marilyn and her case managers, this book emphasizes the intentional exchange of attention and information between case managers, clients, and others within the caring network and clearly outlines a practical method for all service providers, clients, family members, and close friends to follow. Throughout the day, from moment to moment, relationships fluctuate among doing for, doing with, standing by for support, and doing for oneself. By observing Marilyn and her case manager, the authors prove the value of mutually and continuously monitoring these fluctuations within three primary domains: feeling, thinking, and acting while carrying out daily activities. These findings show that managers are often stuck in doing-for modes of relating. Indeed, this may be one of the factors that contribute most to case manager and client burnout. While some clients with severe and persistent symptoms may in fact frequently require others to do for them, some like Marilyn may not require as much. They may need more doing with and standing by to encourage mastery and the internalization of confidence. The Case Managers Handbook
