MPLS Layer 3 VPN Explained

Lesson Contents

1. VRF (Virtual Routing and Forwarding)
2. MP-BGP (Multi Protocol BGP)
 - 2.1. RD (Route Distinguisher)
 - 2.2. RT (Route Target)

In previous lessons I explained the basics of MPLS:

- Introduction to MPLS
- MPLS Labels and Devices
- MPLS LDP
- VRF

In this lesson we will look at MPLS L3 VPNs and we will build upon the things you learned in previous lessons. By now you should know what MPLS is about. What about the L3 VPN part? Here's what it is about:

- Layer 3: the service provider will participate in routing with the customer. The customer will run OSPF, EIGRP, BGP or any other routing protocol with the service provider, these routes can be shared with other sites of the customer.
- VPN: routing information from one customer is completely separated from other customers and tunneled over the service provider MPLS network.

Let's look at an example:

Above we have two customers connected to a service provider network. Customer A and B each have two sites and you can see that they are using the same IP ranges.

Customer A might use OSPF between their sites and customer B could use EIGRP between their sites. Everything from these customers is completely separated by the service provider.
