natural selection changes the range of traits in a population - there are 3 ways it can change. Let's look at a multi population that shows

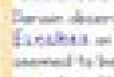

ORIGINAL TO 100 POPULATION

Evolution by natural selection

Describe the theory of natural selection and how the theory was first conceived (thought of).

An English naturalist named Charles Darwin went on a voyage around the world. He noticed that animals in similar environments had similar characteristics. For example, in the Galápagos islands, Darwin observed similar but non-identified species of finches on each island. He noticed that their beaks seemed to be adapted to their food source. After some time thinking and the work of other scientists, Darwin developed the theory of natural selection.

Individuals with favorable traits are more likely to survive and reproduce, passing on those traits to their offspring. Over time, the population becomes better adapted to its environment.

Individuals with unfavorable traits are less likely to survive and reproduce, leading to their elimination from the population.

An example of natural selection!

A population of light brown mice lived on an island of dark rock. They had no burrows.	Cool! A predator came, but the mice were safe because they had no burrows.
Some mice had a mutation for a darker coat. They were called 'dark mice'.	Wow! A predator came, but the dark mice were safe because they had burrows.
The mice with dark fur are better adapted to the dark rock where they live.	The light brown mice are more likely to get eaten - they are the best to survive.
A higher proportion of dark mice reproduced, passing on the beneficial trait.	Over time, the population became mostly dark mice because only the dark mice survived to reproduce.
