ORIGINAL TOBY POPULATION

Evolution by natural selection

Describe the theory of natural selection and how this theory was first conceived (thought of).

An English naturalist named Charles Darwin went on a voyage around the world. He noticed that animals in similar environments had similar characteristics. For example, in the Galápagos islands, Darwin observed similar but non-identified species of finches on each island. He noticed that their beaks seemed to be adapted to their food source. After some time thinking and the work of other scientists, Darwin developed his theory of natural selection.

Individuals with favorable traits are more likely to survive and reproduce, passing on those traits to their offspring. Over time, the population becomes better adapted to its environment.

Individuals with favorable traits are more likely to survive and reproduce, passing on those traits to their offspring. Over time, the population becomes better adapted to its environment.

An example of natural selection!

A population of light brown moths lived in an area of dark rock. They had a few dark brown moths.	Cool! A predator hawk arrived that started eating moths that were dark brown. The hawk was looking for the common variation.
Some dark brown moths survived and reproduced. The hawk was looking for the common variation.	Wow! The light brown moths were now more likely to get eaten. They are the birds' favorite.
The moths with dark fur are camouflage against the dark rock where they live.	The light brown moths are now more likely to get eaten. They are the birds' favorite.
A higher proportion of dark moths survived and reproduced, passing on the beneficial trait.	Over time, the population has changed. In 10 years, 90% of the moths have dark fur.

Stabilizing selection

Stabilizing selection is a type of natural selection that favors the average phenotype and selects against extreme phenotypes.

Stabilizing selection represents the graph - σ^2

What is it?

Gene flow is the movement of genes in or out of a population. It can happen through migration of individuals or the movement of gametes, such as pollen or sperm.

Gene flow can bring new alleles into a population or change the frequency of existing alleles.

Gene flow is an example of microevolution.
