Douglas Brown,1994 Language Teaching Methodology ,1995 Effects of Task-based Language Teaching on the Students' Motivation with a Focus on Speaking ,2023-07-31 Seminar paper from the year 2020 in the subject Pedagogy School Pedagogics grade 1 University of Innsbruck language English abstract In this paper the Task based Language Teaching approach and its connection to motivation is explained In order to gain a better insight into the topic of TBLT and speaking in correlation with motivation five articles on the topic were chosen and analyzed Similar as well as different approaches used in these studies and their results are discussed with a particular focus on implications for teaching Finally these approaches and results were critically evaluated in terms of the provided evidence to back them up Speaking skills are one of the most vital skills to acquire as an EFL learner and the most useful skill for most of the students future. However, traditional language education usually focuses too little on practice and application of the language, especially when it comes to real world tasks that should be practiced inside the classroom as well as task based language teaching. Among the key competencies, the most challenging is typically speaking because of the students negative attitude towards it. This is due to different factors such as not liking the language, anxiety, or lack of vocabulary.
