natural selection changes the range of traits in a population - there are 3 ways it can change. Let's look at a moth population that shows

ORIGINAL TOYU POPULATION

Evolution by natural selection

Describe the theory of natural selection and how the theory was first conceived (thought of).

An English naturalist named Charles Darwin went on a voyage around the world. He noticed that animals in similar environments had similar characteristics. For example, in the Galápagos islands, Darwin observed similar but non-identical species of finches on each island. He noticed that their beaks seemed to be adapted to their food source. After some time thinking and the work of other scientists, Darwin developed his theory of natural selection.

Individuals with favorable traits are more likely to survive and reproduce, passing on their characteristics to their offspring. Over time, the population becomes better adapted to its environment.

Individuals with unfavorable traits are less likely to survive and reproduce, leading to their characteristics being passed on less frequently.

Over time, the population becomes better adapted to its environment.

Individuals with favorable traits are more likely to survive and reproduce, passing on their characteristics to their offspring.

Over time, the population becomes better adapted to its environment.

An example of natural selection!

A population of light brown moths lived in an area of dark rock. They had a few very dark ones.	Cool! A predator hawk arrived that started to hunt for the common variation.
Wow! The moths with dark fur are camouflaged against the dark rock where they live.	NOOOOOO!!! The light brown moths are more likely to get eaten - they are the birds' favorite!
A higher proportion of dark moths reproduced, passing on the beneficial trait.	Over time, the population has changed so that most of the moths have dark fur.

Individuals with extreme traits are more likely to be selected against the median trait.

Stabilizing selection represents the graph - σ^2

Gene Flow - an example:

Water Island (1871)

Individuals with favorable traits are more likely to survive and reproduce, passing on their characteristics to their offspring.
