Iso Standards For Tea

Iso Standards For Tea:

Tea K.C. Willson, M.N. Clifford, 2012-12-06 Tea is a unique crop and incidentally a very interesting and attractive one. The tea bush, its cultivation and harvesting do not fit into any typical cropping pattern. Moreover, its processing and marketing are specific to tea. Thus, the Tea Industry stands apart and constitutes a self-contained entity. This is reflected in the title given to this book: Tea Cultivation to consumption and its treatment of the subject. The book is logically planned, starting with the plant itself and finishing with the traditional cuppa. Every aspect of tea production is covered, inevitably some in greater detail than others. However, it gives an authentic and comprehensive picture of the tea industry. The text deals in detail with cultural practices and research where desirable on a regional basis. The technology of tea cultivation and processing has been developed within the industry, aided by applied research which was largely financed by the tea companies themselves. This contributed to a technically competent industry but tended to bypass the more academic and fundamental investigations which might bring future rewards. The sponsorship of research has now widened and the range and depth of tea research has increased accordingly. The editors and authors of this book have played their part in these recent developments which are well reported in the book.

Sri Lanka's Tea Industry Ridwan Ali, 1997-01-01 World Bank Discussion Paper No 367 Many developing countries enforce seed regulations and other policies that obstruct private companies from operating and delivering new technology. This volume presents recommendations and selected papers from an international workshop organized by the World Bank in 1995 to review seed policies and to develop recommendations on ways of easing entry barriers for certain varieties of seeds in developing countries. The papers and discussions identified reforms to speed the flow of private seed technology to these countries with a particular focus on reforms and their impacts in Bangladesh, India, Peru and Turkey.

Electronic Noses and Tongues in Food Science Maria Luz Rodriguez Mendez, 2016-02-19 Electronic Noses and Tongues in Food Science describes the electronic products of advanced chemical and physical sciences combined with intuitive integration of microprocessors, advanced bioinformatics and statistics. These include, for example, voltammetric bioelectronic piezoelectric platforms made from a variety of components including nanoparticles, enzyme biosensors, heavy metals, graphite epoxy composites, metal oxide semiconductors, microelectrodes, microfluidic channels, pre-manufactured gas sensors, redox enzymes and others, and is an ideal resource for understanding and utilizing their power in Food Science settings. Devices used to analyse one particular food item can theoretically be adapted for other food items or components. This does not just mean the re-deploying the physical platforms but also the mode of bioinformatic and statistical analysis. This includes artificial neural networks, ANN, linear discriminant analysis, LDA, partial least squares, PLS, principal component analysis, PCA, etc. In other words, there is cross-transference of chemistry, physics concepts, techniques, findings and approaches from one food to another. Electronic noses and tongues are two of these devices but are advancing in application and importance. This book provides examples of the use of electronic noses and tongues to characterise components that contribute to sensory or compositional profiles from ripening to harvesting and from storage of raw materials to packaging and consumption These devices are suitable for high throughput analysis quality control or to determine the nature and extent of spoilage and adulteration and have also been used to ascertain the geographical origins of food and mixtures Presents latest developments in the application of electronic nose and tongue technologies to a variety of food specific needs Includes both electronic nose electronic tongue and combined technology insights Each chapter has sections on The physical and chemical platforms Analysis of specific foods Applications to other foods and areas of food science
