A Comparative Political Ecology of Exurbia Laura E. Taylor, Patrick T. Hurley, 2016-05-26 This book is about politics and planning outside of cities where urban political economy and planning theories do not account for the resilience of places that are no longer rural and where local communities work hard to keep from ever becoming urban By examining exurbia as a type of place that is no longer simply rural or only tied to the economies of global resources e g mining forestry and agriculture we explore how changing landscapes are planned and designed not to be urban that is to look function and feel different from cities and suburbs in spite of new home development and real estate speculation The book's authors contend that exurbia is defined by the persistence of rural economies, the conservation of rural character and protection of natural ecological systems, all of which are critical components of the contentious local politics that seek to limit growth. Comparative political ecology is used as an organizing concept throughout the book to describe the nature of exurban areas in the U.S. and Australia, although exurbs are common to many countries. The essays each describe distinctive case studies, with each chapter using the key concepts of competing rural capitalisms and uneven environmental management to describe the politics of exurban change. This systematic analysis makes the processes of exurban change easier to see and understand. Based on these case studies, seven characteristics of exurban places are identified: rural character, access, local economic change, ideologies of nature, changes in land management, coalition building, and land use planning. This book will be of interest to those who study planning, conservation, and land development issues, especially in areas of high natural amenity or environmental value. There is no political ecology book quite like this, neither one solely focused on cases from the developed world (in this case, the United States and Australia) nor one that specifically harnesses different case studies from multiple areas to develop a central organizing perspective of landscape change.

Pathways to a Carbon-Free Future Through Advanced Nuclear Systems Kulkarni, Shrikaant, Das, Susanta, 2025-06-12

Achieving a carbon-free future is a pressing challenge, and advanced nuclear systems emerge as a pivotal solution in the global transition to clean energy. As the world seeks reliable, low-emission alternatives to fossil fuels, next-generation nuclear technologies offer promising solutions for deep decarbonization. These systems are designed to be safer, more efficient, and more adaptable than traditional nuclear plants, pairing well with renewable sources like wind and solar. By investing in and accelerating the deployment of advanced nuclear energy, organizations can strengthen energy security while reducing greenhouse gas emissions. Pathways to a Carbon-Free Future Through Advanced Nuclear Systems explores the latest developments in nuclear energy, presenting a visionary pathway for its role in addressing global climate challenges. It examines the integration of nuclear power with renewable energy systems, showcasing hybrid approaches that combine the reliability of nuclear energy with the intermittency of wind and solar, presenting nuclear energy's role in decarbonizing heavy industries. This book covers topics such as renewable energy, climate resilience, and carbon emissions, and is a useful resource for engineers, business owners, academicians, researchers, and environmental scientists.

Disaster, Public Health, and Older People Emily Ying Yang Chan, 2019-08-23

Disaster, Public Health, and Older People introduces professionals, students, and fieldworkers to the science and art of promoting health and well-being among older people in the context of humanitarian emergencies, with a particular focus on low- and middle-income country settings. Older people face specific vulnerabilities in physical, mental, and social well-being during disasters. They are likely to experience socio-economic marginalisation, isolation, inaccessible information, and a lack of relevant post-emergency support services. Meanwhile, although older people can also significantly contribute to disaster preparedness, response, and recovery, their capacities are often underutilised. Drawing on a range of global case studies, this book provides readers with a theoretical underpinning while suggesting actions at the individual community and national levels to reduce the health risks to older people posed by the increasing frequency and intensity of disaster in particular those resulting from natural hazards Topics covered range from the health impact of disasters on older people and response to their post disaster health needs to disaster preparedness disease prevention healthy ageing global policy developments and the contributions of older people in disaster contexts This book draws on lessons learnt from previous disasters and targets students and professionals working in disaster medicine disaster public health humanitarian studies gerontology and geriatrics
