The Development of Visuospatial Attentional Orienting Rina Schul,2003 As our current understanding of the mechanisms of attentional orienting is based primarily on studies with adults I set out to track normal and abnormal development of visuospatial attentional orienting To that end I examined typically developing individuals and individuals with one of two developmental disorders Specific Language Impairment SLI or Williams Syndrome WS on one task assessing visual discrimination and another wherein accurate performance additionally requires attentional orienting The latter task patterned after Posner s cuing paradigm reveals patterns of attentional shift and disengagement and the benefits and costs of attentional orienting An initial study examined 200 typically developing children 7 17 yrs and 40 young adults 18 40 yrs and found gradual improvement from 7 to 18 years in a the speed and efficiency of attentional orienting and b the efficiency of disengaging attention and processing stimuli in unattended locations A second study examined 15 children 7 15 yrs with SLI Though known for their significant language problems in the absence of hearing impairment low nonverbal IQ social emotional disorder or frank neurological damage SLI individuals also exhibit less specific perceptual and motor deficits presumably due to generalized slowness in processing Since the covert movement of attention relies on rapid neurocognitive processes I expected this to be adversely affected in SLI While the SLI group displayed slowed visual processing and motor responses relative to age matched controls the speed of their visuospatial attentional orienting was normal A third study examined 16 individuals 16 47 yrs with WS who have the mental age of young children however with relative strengths in language and face processing and profound deficits in visuospatial processing Moreover as WS brains have anomalies primarily in dorsal posterior areas including the parietal cortex and cerebellum both implicated in attention I hypothesized that WS visuospatial attentional orienting might be impaired WS performance on the attention test was severely compromised although they did demonstrate use of attentional cues to direct their behavior Together my data illustrate age related changes in the efficiency and speed of components of visuospatial attentional orienting during the school age years These changes appear to be unaffected in SLI and arrested in WS
