Traditional building economics has primarily been concerned with issues around project appraisal and cost management techniques. On the other hand, modern construction economics has a wider focus with stronger links to mainstream economics, reflecting an increased interest in a range of theoretical issues in construction economics both at the macro and micro level. In Modern Construction Economics: Theory and Application, a variety of approaches are used to present a coherent vision of synthesis between industry economics and project economics. Topics covered include developing construction economics as industry economics, competition and barriers to entry in construction, innovation in construction theory, testing in construction management, research, collusion and corruption in the construction sector. Including contributions from academics in the UK, Sweden, Hong Kong, and Australia, this is a truly global review of a core issue for the construction industry worldwide. The result is a unique book that will push toward the development of a comprehensive theoretical framework of construction economics. This is a must read for all serious students of construction economics and all practitioners looking for a deeper understanding of their industry.

New Approaches to Compensation for Residential Takings, Fred P. Bosselman, Michael D. Newsom, Clifford L. Weaver, 1970

The compensation and relocation of individuals and families displaced by highway construction have been viewed more and more as the responsibility of public agencies but as yet the full scope of this responsibility has not been defined nor have methods for meeting the responsibility been adequately studied and evaluated. The underlying premise of this report is that compensation to those displaced by a public project may be increased without increasing the overall demand on the public treasury for highway dollars. In the federal aid highway act of 1968, congress recognized that dollars spent in avoiding dissatisfaction may be more efficient than dollars spent in dealing with the effects of that dissatisfaction.
