1. Why is a healthy, balanced diet essential for fuelling and recovering from exercise and physical activity?

Nutrition works hand-in-hand with exercise because it is the fuel your body needs to replenish itself after a workout. It helps maintain blood-glucose concentration during exercise, maximise exercise performance, and improve recovery time. A proper combination of carbohydrates, protein and fats will fuel the body with ATP and all the nutrients it needs to recover properly afterwards.

2 marks (minimum 1 mark)

2. What is the role of each macronutrient in relation to generating energy for exercise and physical activity?

|                     |   |
|---------------------|---|
| Protein      | Helps provide energy when glycogen levels are low.  |
| Fat          | It is a major source of energy during lower intensity workouts. This also includes saturated fat as having some of it, provisions energy and structural integrity to the cells. |
| Carbohydrate | They are converted into glucose. With that they get converted into energy more easily than proteins or fats.  |

3 marks (minimum 3 marks)

3. What is the role of each macronutrient in post-exercise recovery?

|                     |  |
|---------------------|--|
| Protein      | Protein breakdown increases during and immediately after exercise. So it is important to supply the necessary amount depending on the fitness goal to compensate for the loss. |
| Fat          | They help transport oxygen and keep the red blood cells healthy which are vital and are challenged during exercise.  |
| Carbohydrate | Glycogen stores need to be refilled after exercise. If you don't eat enough carbohydrates, it will take longer to refuel and can result in early tiredness.                    |
