"These facts prove irrefragably that the sectional hostility which exhibited itself in 1850... which again looks not on the proposition for the annexation of Texas in 1845, and which happened after the Mexican war... was the offspring of sectional rivalry and political ambition. It would have manifested itself just as certainly if slavery had existed in all the States, or if there had not been a negro in America... It was not slavery that threatened a rupture in 1850 but the unjust and unequal operation of a protective tariff... the existence of African servitude was no more the cause of the conflict, but only an incident."

Document 10

"I take higher ground. I think that in the present state of civilization, where two races of different origin, and distinguished by color, and other physical differences, as well as intellectual, are brought together, the relation now existing in the slaveholding States between the two is, instead of good, a good—a positive good. I may use words, but in few countries so much a hell to the slave of the laborer, and so little created from him, as where there is more than a million paid to him in wages or subsistence of age. I compare his condition with the wants of the great laborer in the more civilized portions of Europe—look at the sick, and the old and infirm slaves, on one hand, in the midst of his family and friends, under the kind superintending care of his master and mistress, and compare it with the broken and wretched condition of the pauper. I hold that, that there never has yet existed a wealthy and civilized society in which one portion of the community did not, in point of fact, live on the labor of the other."
—John C. Calhoun, 1857
