

Chi-Square Test

The chi-square test is the appropriate test through the tested data is qualitative. Designed for categorical data, the usual null hypothesis is $H_0: \text{Independence of all variables and observed values}$. The test is used to evaluate whether the observed frequencies differ significantly from the expected frequencies. The test is used to evaluate the independence of two variables and to evaluate the fit of a distribution to a set of data. The test is used to evaluate the independence of two variables and to evaluate the fit of a distribution to a set of data. The test is used to evaluate the independence of two variables and to evaluate the fit of a distribution to a set of data.

Example 1: Chi-Square Test for Independence

The chi-square test is used to evaluate the independence of two variables. In this example, we will use the test to judge whether weight has any influence on gender preference with respect to the following data. The data is as follows:

Gender	Weight	Count
Male	Light	10
Male	Medium	20
Male	Heavy	10
Female	Light	15
Female	Medium	10
Female	Heavy	5

The expected counts under H_0 are as follows:

Gender	Weight	Expected Count
Male	Light	12.5
Male	Medium	25
Male	Heavy	12.5
Female	Light	17.5
Female	Medium	12.5
Female	Heavy	6.25

The chi-square test statistic is calculated as follows:

$$\chi^2 = \sum \frac{(O - E)^2}{E} = \frac{(10 - 12.5)^2}{12.5} + \frac{(20 - 25)^2}{25} + \frac{(10 - 12.5)^2}{12.5} + \frac{(15 - 17.5)^2}{17.5} + \frac{(10 - 12.5)^2}{12.5} + \frac{(5 - 6.25)^2}{6.25} = 10.0$$

The test statistic is compared to the critical value of χ^2 for a significance level of 0.05 and 2 degrees of freedom. The critical value is 5.991. Since the test statistic is greater than the critical value, we reject the null hypothesis and conclude that there is a significant association between weight and gender preference.
