Researchers disagree over the definition, measurement, and expected political consequences of American patriotism, a situation that is fueled by the absence of a strong theoretical research foundation. We develop and evaluate a new measure of national attachment that is grounded in social identity theory (Tajfel and Turner 1979), drawing on data from three distinct sources: two studies of undergraduate students and the 1996 General Social Survey (GSS). Confirmatory factor analyses provide clear evidence that national identity is distinct from other measures of national attachment including symbolic, constructive, and uncritical patriotism, and nationalism. National identity has a number of other good measurement properties when compared to existing measures: it receives equal endorsement from conservatives and liberals (unlike most other measures which exhibit an ideological bias), develops with time spent in the United States among immigrants, and most importantly is the only measure of national attachment to predict political interest and voter turnout in both student and adult samples, consistent with the predictions of social identity theory. In that sense, the national identity measure outperforms all other measures of national attachment and provides unambiguous evidence that a strong American identity promotes civic involvement.

Research on patriotism has been marred by a confusing array of terms, definitions, and expected consequences in which patriotism is variously defined as a sense of national loyalty, a love of national symbols, specific beliefs about a country's superiority, and as a crucial ingredient in the development of civic ties to a mature nation (Hurwitz and Peffley 1999; Spinner-Halev and Theiss-Morse 2003; Sullivan, Fried, and Dietz 1992). Patriotism researchers have reached some (although far from uniform) consensus that a sense of superiority and need for foreign dominance better reflect nationalism than patriotism (De Figueiredo and Elkins 2003; Karasawa 2002; Kosterman and Feshbach 1989; Munzunday, Klink, and Brown 2001; Sidanius et al. 1997), clarifying what patriotism is not. But this still leaves considerable disagreement over what exactly it is.

Diverse Forms of Patriotism

There is broad agreement on the meaning of patriotism as "a deeply felt affective attachment to the nation" (Conover and Feldman 1987, 1) or the "degree of love for and pride in one's nation" (Kosterman and Feshbach 1989, 271). More pronounced disagreement emerges, however, over the way in which patriotism is measured. Patriotism items are commonly tinged with political ideology in the United States, resulting in greater apparent patriotism among political conservatives than liberals. Consider the symbolic patriotism scale in the American National Election Studies (ANES), which combines pride in being American with pride in the flag and anthem (Conover and Feldman 1987; Hurwitz and Peffley 1999; Karasawa 2002; Kosterman and Feshbach 1989; Sidanius et al. 1997). Ideological bias

Constructing the Narratives of Identity and Power Karina V. Korostelina, 2013-12-16 Twenty years ago Ukraine gained its independence and started on a path towards a free market economy and democratic governance After four successive presidents and the Orange Revolution the question of exactly which national model Ukraine should embrace remains an open question Constructing the Narratives of Identity and Power provides a comprehensive outlook on Ukraine as it is presented through the views of intellectual and political elites Based on extensive field work in Ukraine Karina V Korostelina describes the complex process of nation building Despite the prevailing belief in a divide between two parts of Ukraine and an overwhelming variety of incompatible visions Korostelina reveals seven prevailing conceptual models of Ukraine and five dominant narratives of national identity Constructing the Narratives of Identity and Power analyzes the practice of national self imagination Karina V Korostelina puts forward a structural functional model of national narratives that describes three major components dualistic order mythic narratives and normative order and two main functions of national narratives the development of the meaning of national identity and the legitimization of power Korostelina describes the differences and conflicting elements of the national narratives that constitute the contested arena of nation building in Ukraine

African American Coping in the Political Sphere Jas M. Sullivan, Moriah Harman, 2023-10-01 Psychosocial stressors are a part of the human condition Individuals experience a myriad of stressors in their everyday lives and while many people experience some of the same types of stressors responses and reactions to stressful life events interactions and situations often vary Research has shown that these stressors often have negative effects on physical and mental health outcomes among others Thus the way one copes with psychosocial stressors is important for explaining human behavior and variations across and within certain groups For African Americans there are added stressors that impact daily functioning due to no fault of their own These stressors include but are not limited to discrimination microaggressions and police brutality as well as income health and education inequalities Inspired by the John Henryism hypothesis and more broadly the research on John Henryism African American Coping in the Political Sphere explores the influence coping has on African Americans political attitudes and behaviors Jas M Sullivan and Moriah Harman reveal that coping plays a role in political outcomes just as it does in social economic psychological and health outcomes Consequently coping offers insight into why some individuals believe and behave in the ways that they do in the political sphere
