

...the curriculum is a social construct, a product of the interaction of various social forces and interests. It is not a neutral, objective set of facts to be discovered, but a set of values and beliefs that are shaped by the culture and society in which it is developed. The curriculum is a reflection of the dominant ideology of the time, and it is through the curriculum that this ideology is transmitted to the next generation. The curriculum is a tool of socialization, a means of inculcating the values and beliefs of the dominant group in society. It is through the curriculum that the dominant group seeks to maintain its power and influence over the next generation.

CONCLUSION

The curriculum is a complex and contested field, one that is shaped by a variety of social, cultural, and political forces. It is not a neutral, objective set of facts to be discovered, but a set of values and beliefs that are shaped by the culture and society in which it is developed. The curriculum is a tool of socialization, a means of inculcating the values and beliefs of the dominant group in society. It is through the curriculum that the dominant group seeks to maintain its power and influence over the next generation.
