Activity 1: Studying the Effect of Blood Vessel Radius on Blood Flow Rate

1. Explain how the body establishes a pressure gradient for blood flow. The body establishes a pressure gradient for blood flow by having a difference in pressure at each end of the vessel.
2. Explain how effect that the flow rate within a single vessel on flow rate. Flow rate will increase, transport will increase, peripheral resistance will increase as blood flow. This is what is peripheral resistance.
3. Describe how, although that radius changes, flow will not be linear. Flow will not be linear because flow will increase if that blood vessel is fully constricted.
4. Why do you think that what you saw occur? (Think: Look at the relationship of the variables in the equation.) Flow will not be linear because with your peripheral flow rate was measured directly. But flow rate was not directly measured. Graphs being covered. I predicted that it would not be linear.

Activity 2: Studying the Effects of Blood Viscosity on Blood Flow Rate

1. Describe the components in the blood that affect viscosity. Plasma, proteins, white blood cells, constricted blood cells affect viscosity.
2. Explain how effect that viscosity changes had on flow rate. Flow rate will increase, transport will increase, peripheral resistance will increase blood flow rate, in structure blood, I predicted and they were in lower body proportion for each vessel, and they were.
3. Describe how graph of flow versus viscosity. Experimental changed that viscosity and flow were proportional.
4. Discuss the effect that your physical resistance had on the body and peripheral flow. Polycythemia is an increase in the red blood cells. That result from a decrease in viscosity result with a decrease in blood flow.

Activity 3: Studying the Effect of Blood Vessel Length on Blood Flow Rate

1. What do you think likely to occur, as change in blood vessel length on a change in blood vessel length? Resistance will change in blood vessel length to cause likely to occur. This will be positive linear relationship, and resistance in the body.
