Lysimeter System Designs Used in Soils Research B. D. Titus, M. K. Mahendrappa, Canadian Forest Service, Newfoundland and Labrador Region, 1996 This review considers the agricultural forestry and ground water monitoring literature and reports on the current designs of lysimeters that are relevant for use in forestry nutrient cycling studies The review begins with a brief history of lysimetry and then presents a functional classification scheme which is used as a framework for discussing variations in lysimeter system design The impact of lysimeter system design on sampling artefacts is briefly discussed and the literature on the effect of construction materials on soil solution contamination is tabulated Statistical considerations of special interest involve the determination of sample size and distribution of the data The appendix includes a translation of de la Hire's paper published in 1720 sometimes cited as an example of the earliest published work on lysimetry

Neural Information Processing: Research and Development Jagath Chandana Rajapakse, Lipo Wang, 2012-12-06 The field of neural information processing has two main objects investigation into the functioning of biological neural networks and use of artificial neural networks to solve real world problems Even before the reincarnation of the field of artificial neural networks in mid nineteen eighties researchers have attempted to explore the engineering of human brain function After the reincarnation we have seen an emergence of a large number of neural network models and their successful applications to solve real world problems This volume presents a collection of recent research and developments in the field of neural information processing The book is organized in three Parts i e 1 architectures 2 learning algorithms and 3 applications Artificial neural networks consist of simple processing elements called neurons which are connected by weights The number of neurons and how they are connected to each other defines the architecture of a particular neural network Part 1 of the book has nine chapters demonstrating some of recent neural network architectures derived either to mimic aspects of human brain function or applied in some real world problems Muresan provides a simple neural network model based on spiking neurons that make use of shunting inhibition which is capable of resisting small scale changes of stimulus Hoshino and Zheng simulate a neural network of the auditory cortex to investigate neural basis for encoding and perception of vowel sounds
