A Campaign Of Ropes: Major J. Kevin Hendrick, 2015-11-06 The purpose of this paper was to study the practice of military art at the operational level of war The story of Wellington's ultimate success against Napoleon's Marshals was selected as a case study as it seemed rich in the application of mental agility to achieve an asymmetrical military advantage in a theater of war As military theory recognizes two general types of military art classical strategy and operational art the research question was constructed to determine if Wellington practiced pure classic strategy or an early transitional form of operational art In order to provide a basis of analysis the essential elements of both classic strategy and operational art are next defined The history of classic strategy is outlined then the theory of Clausewitz and Jomini used to define its four basic elements The practice of operational art is then traced from its inception by U S Grant during the American Civil War to Soviet operational theory developed in the 1920's The theory of Dr

James Schneider a primary interpreter of both Grant and the Soviets provides the eight essential elements of operational art To round out the section on military art U S operational doctrine is outlined and discussed Like most military officers Wellington was a creature of his own experience therefore a chapter is dedicated to the lessons he learned as a young officer in India The following chapter is dedicated to a study of the Peninsular War As the research question deals with both the operational and strategic levels of war Wellington s tactics are neglected in favor of his campaign concepts and execution
