

An Integrative Theory of Motivation, Volition, and Performance

JOHN KELLER*

There are many independent theories and constructs pertaining to motivation, volition, and learning and the total number continues to expand. In contrast, it could be beneficial for guiding research and practice to have more theories that are integrative in nature; that help explain relationships among theories in relation to motivation, volition, learning, and performance. Typically, researchers focus on a bounded set of questions within a given area of interest that incorporates a specific paradigm of inquiry. However, to have integrative theories it is necessary to move outside of the given paradigms and demonstrate how these various approaches can be combined to provide more explanatory frames of reference than any one of them can do by itself. In this paper such an integrative theory is proposed. It preserves the integrity of the constituent concepts and theories and provides a basis for cross-paradigm studies. This theory of motivation, volition, and performance (MVP) builds upon an established integrative theory but expands it by incorporating the concept of intentions, action control, and information processing within the framework of a system model. Furthermore, the theory illustrates how environmental (external) influences on behavior combine with internal psychological constructs and processes in relation to goal directed effort, performance, consequences, and outcomes. The paper concludes with a discussion of implications of the theory for research and practice.

Keywords: Motivation, intentions, volition, motivational design, ARCS model, self-regulation, performance, learning.

Handbook of Research on Educational Communications and Technology J. Michael Spector, M. David

Merrill, Jan Elen, M. J. Bishop, 2013-07-03 The 4th edition of the Handbook of Research on Educational Communications and Technology expands upon the previous 3 versions providing a comprehensive update on research pertaining to new and emerging educational technologies. Chapters that are no longer pertinent have been eliminated in this edition with most chapters being completely rewritten, expanded and updated. Additionally, new chapters pertaining to research methodologies in educational technology have been added due to expressed reader interest. Each chapter now contains an extensive literature review documenting and explaining the most recent outstanding research, including major findings and methodologies employed. The Handbook authors continue to be international leaders in their respective fields; the list is cross-disciplinary by design and great effort was taken to invite authors outside of the traditional instructional design and technology community.

Interactivity in E-Learning: Case Studies and Frameworks Wang, Haomin, 2011-12-31 This book provides a comprehensive examination of interactivity, combining key perspectives from communication and media studies, distributed cognition, system affordances, user control, and social interaction, intended for researchers working in the fields of communication and media, educational media, e-learning, and instructional technology. Provided by publisher.

Augmentative and Alternative Communication for Adults with Acquired Neurologic Disorders David R. Beukelman, Kathryn M. Yorkston, Joe Reichle, 2000 The loss of speech in adulthood due to acquired disabilities causes an enormous life change for the person it happens to and everyone close to them. With this important book, you will explore the challenges these individuals face during the transition from speaking to using augmentative and alternative communications (AAC). You will learn new ways to design individualized AAC systems that will help rebuild their communicative confidence and encourage acceptance of their new lives, and for some even before speech is lost. Practical and accessible, this research-based resource addresses recent social, medical, and technical changes and how they affect adults with communication disorders. Part 1 discusses the everyday transition issues they struggle with, such as establishing new communication roles and integrating their natural speech with AAC, while Part 2 covers the six leading neurological disorders in adults: amyotrophic lateral sclerosis, Huntington's disease, Parkinson's disease, traumatic brain injury, aphasia, and dementia.

Volition and Personality Julius Kuhl, Jürgen Beckmann, 1994 This is an impressive book which presents a profoundly new approach to analyzing human behavior. The fundamental concept is to focus on how people link motivation with action and why they do or do not stick with their original intentions. The fascinating studies reported here attempt to separate people into two groups: 1. State-oriented individuals who focus under stress on past, present, or future states rather than on options available for action, versus 2. Action-oriented individuals who focus under stress on action alternatives. This book will be of great interest to both behavioral and cognitive psychologists, psychophysicists, and specialists in sport as well as aviation psychology.
