RELEASE David W. Johnson, John L. Woodward, 2010-09-17 This book documents CCPS's Aerosol Research Program to develop a model to predict liquid rainout from release of a pressurized liquefied gas and hence the residual amount of material in a vapor cloud which may be greater than the amount calculated from an enthalpy chart RELEASE predicts the rate of fluid discharge the depressurization flashing and formation of liquid drops the entrainment of drops into the vapor cloud the subsequent spreading of the jet and rate of liquid rainout to a pool on the ground Designed in a modular fashion to permit adjustment and corrections as new data become available its multi layered approach contains sub models that include the complexities of many variables including the effect of liquid superheat rate of bubble growth criterion for bubble formation and heat transfer from the liquid to the growing vapor bubble To validate RELEASE CCPS conducted small and large scale experiments using superheated water heated liquefied chlorine methylamine and cyclohexane that produced valuable data in an area where data are scarce This book gives complete access in text and on CD ROM to the model and the test data giving users an informed ability to apply the model to their own work

Reilly,2012-12-06 Industrial food processing involves the production of added value foods on a large scale these foods are made by mixing and processing different ingredients in a prescribed way The food industry historically has not designed its processes in an engineering sense i e by understanding the physical and chemical principles which govern the operation of the plant and then using those principles to develop a process Rather processes have been designed by purchasing equipment from a range of suppliers and then connecting that equipment together to form a complete process When the process being run has essentially been scaled up from the kitchen then this may not matter However there are limits to the approach As the industry becomes more sophisticated and economies of scale are exploited then the size of plant reaches a scale where systematic design techniques are needed The range of processes and products made by the food industry has increased to include foods which have no kitchen counterpart such as low fat spreads It is vital to ensure the quality and safety of the product Plant must be flexible and able to cope with the need to make a variety of products from a range of ingredients This is especially important as markets evolve with time The traditional design process cannot readily handle multi product and multi stream operations Processes must be energetically efficient and meet modern environmental standards Microsoft Visual Basic for Applications (VBA).
