"The Temperamental Problem Laid on the Altar"

By David Mervin Long

The thoughts of Lafayette were an important factor in the American Revolutionary War. Born into a privileged aristocracy in 1757 and educated at age 13, Lafayette was left with a vast internationalist outlook. He only 20 years old, but possessed a great ability, following on the knowledge of his family's progressive military history. Two years later, he supported his uncle and his six friends voluntarily enlisting in the American Revolution in America, in relation of the King.

Just 20, despite his wealth and high standing in France's aristocracy, Lafayette was not content. During a stay in Paris, he learned of the American soldiers' needs against the British. He began to attend and participate in meetings for political (philosophical matters) with other aristocrats who sympathized with the soldiers and their quest of independence. He was also inspired by the French Revolution, which was in its early stages. He was about the idea of revolution and setting up a republic.

In these meetings, European intellectuals, scientists and philosophers discussed the rights of man, the abolition of slavery, and the principles of the American movement, emphasizing the importance of equality and liberty. These principles were heavily influenced by the Enlightenment's progressivism, centered on the enlightenment and American Revolution. Enlightenment thinkers stressed liberty, equality, and individualism. They challenged ideas rooted in tradition and religion, such as superstitions, authoritarianism, and privilege. Instead they suggested religion through individual study and practical method. Among their philosophies was the idea that citizens should be granted equality and individual freedoms.

In America, France's role is crucially, which means a major part of the country.
