Cloud computing 101

Cloud computing is a broad term that encompasses any technology that's involved in delivering hosted computing services across the internet. Cloud computing is made up of three different types of services: infrastructure as a service (IaaS), platform as a service (PaaS) and software as a service (SaaS). Whether a public or private cloud is deployed, the purpose of cloud computing is to provide access to flexible and scalable computing resources and IT services, either over the web or through a private network.

What is the difference between IaaS, PaaS and SaaS?

USER'S RESPONSIBILITY   SERVICE PROVIDER'S RESPONSIBILITY

	EXAMPLES	APPLICATION	MIDDLEWARE	VIRTUALIZATION	DATA	OS	NETWORKING	RUNTIME	SERVERS	STORAGE
SaaS	Dropbox, Salesforce CRM, Zoom, Office 365, Google Apps	■	■	■	■	■	■	■	■	■
PaaS	Microsoft Azure App Service, AWS Elastic Beanstalk, Google Kubernetes Engine, Red Hat OpenShift	■	■	■	■	■	■	■	■	■
IaaS	Microsoft Azure, Amazon Web Services (AWS), Google Compute Engine (GCE)	■	■	■	■	■	■	■	■	■

What is the difference between on-premises and public cloud computing?

	On-premises	Cloud
SECURITY	IT teams are responsible for the security of all data and workloads.	Providers manage technical administration of security and offer tools for vulnerability management.
RELIABILITY	Even the strongest data center will break at some point. Systems failures and natural disasters can take down entire facilities.	Outages affect availability, so apps that require high availability should stay on premises or be extended across regions for additional redundancy.
COST	Companies pay for the hardware—plus excess capacity if needed—as well as facility operations.	Only pay for what is used. But companies can overpay if a workload isn't properly optimized.
EXPERTISE	Those who have studied and worked with these technologies know the ins and outs of the infrastructure, tape library management, required programming languages and so on.	Takes away the more complex and challenging parts of computing, which allows IT teams to home in on business objectives. It also requires learning skills to adapt to the new environment.

What are the characteristics of a cloud architecture?

Self-service provisioning   Elasticity   Pay-per-use   Workload resilience   Migration flexibility   Broad network access   Resource pooling
