When you were still a very young child, you began acquiring at least one language – what linguists call your L1 – probably without thinking much about it, and with very little conscious effort or awareness. Since that time, you may have acquired an additional language – your L2 – possibly also in the natural course of having the language used around you, but more likely with the same conscious effort needed to acquire other domains of knowledge in the process of becoming an “educated” individual.
