Creative Component: A New Scene from the New Employee’s Perspective

After that long tour in the office, I was invited to occupy my cubicle. I could not help feeling uneasy after learning the absurd instructions. Suddenly, the bell rang, and all the people in the office abruptly got up and went to the room next to the main hall. Not knowing what model of behavior to accept, I decided to give myself up to the movement of the crowd and follow everyone else. In the hall, there was a huge screen and many chairs for workers. All the people entering the hall seemed to know what was going on as they stayed calm and, like trained dogs, could find their places without any confusion.

Suddenly, a man appeared on the screen, holding papers in his hands. After a while, it turned out that it was a national television newscast. The host happily talked about the new decisions of the eternal President. This week, the President banned street kissing and skirts for women and introduced the death penalty for using the telephone. Everyone in the hall greeted the President’s decision with applause. The presenter continued to discuss the country’s achievements in a recently started war with a neighboring state. We were shown rockets launching into residential buildings and the national army entering the enemy’s cities. People in the hall rose from their seats and cursed the new enemies of the nation.

The tour upon arrival at the office and the scene of watching a large TV set formed one single picture for me. It suddenly became way too clear why people felt alone in our office. Being afraid of my own thoughts, I attempted to suppress them and tried not to pay attention to what was happening around me. Despite trying hard to look normal and conceal my disappointment, I knew deep inside that I would not be able to conform to the ubiquitous absurdity and live there happily, even with enough money. Nothing could stop me from fleeing from the country of nonsense.

English in Australia, 1993

English Alive Jan Cousins, Peter Stanley, Luke Jackson, Catherine Reid, 2006 English Alive 3 is the centrepiece of a groundbreaking program for English in the Middle Years. The program focuses strongly on reading and writing and on associated thinking skills and strategies. Beginning with the premise that Middle Years students need to be engaged and stimulated before they can learn effectively, the program recognises that students learn in different ways and draw on multiple intelligences. English Alive 3 is designed to encourage deep learning: students investigate a knowledge area in many layers so that they build deep understanding and develop a range of skills. Reading and writing are taught through a thematic workshop approach using high-interest texts and activities that really teach students the how of literary, everyday, and visual texts. The Jacaranda fiction series is also part of the program. This provides both motivated and reluctant readers with stimulating fiction, some with SOSE Humanities HSIE links. The titles in the series are suitable as set texts or for literature circles and wide reading programs.

Writing for Life Primary English Teaching Association (Australia), 1988 In recent years there has been renewed interest in writing in the primary schools and the process approach has made a big impact on children and their teachers. Yet are we making the most of this approach? Is there not a risk that process writing will just be identified with story writing and forfeit its potential for writing in all areas of the curriculum? Are our children learning to use the different kinds of writing that they will need in the course of their education and their lives? The contributors to this book, who include several practising teachers, argue that children should be taught how to write in the various genres or kinds of writing that are needed. Drawing on their own experiences, they show how teachers can develop their teaching of
