Properties of Matter

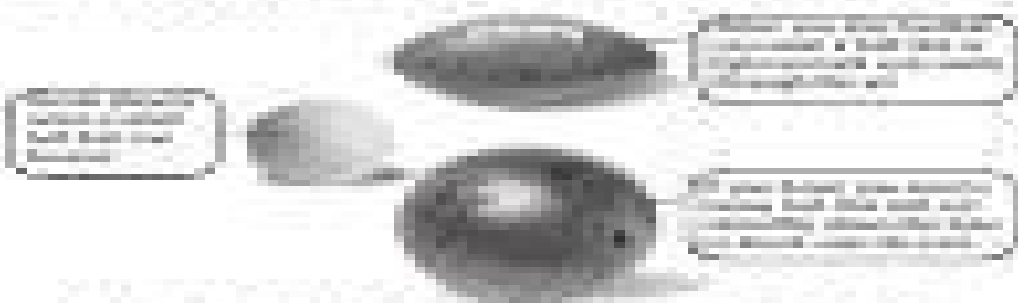

QUESTIONS

Are you able to determine, from these questions, the subject of the following chapters, and classify them as physical or chemical properties?

- Why are cooking, ironing, and dyeing physical properties?
- Why are dissolving, rusting, and burning chemical properties?

What Are Physical Properties?

Look at the table in the chapter before you and list as many physical properties as you can think of.

If physical properties are characteristics that can be observed without changing the identity of the substance, then the properties of an object can only be observed, but cannot be changed. For example, you can observe an object's color, texture, shape, size, or weight. In general, the properties of an object are determined by the properties of the particles that compose it.

Many of the physical properties of materials that make up objects can be measured. These properties include density, hardness, magnetism, and the ability to conduct heat and electricity.

Some physical properties depend on how much of a material you have. In other words, a large amount of a material may have different properties than a smaller amount of the material. Other physical properties do not depend on how much of the material you have. They show that no matter how large or small a sample of material is, the particular property is always the same.

LEARNING OBJECTIVE

Identify, as given, the materials or objects having characteristic physical properties and distinguish them from those having chemical properties.

LEARNING OBJECTIVE

Identify and draw proper labels for physical properties shown in diagrams.

LEARNING OBJECTIVE

Identify and describe the properties of matter.
