

Alligators

Scientists have conducted experiments on many different animals to determine whether there are any relationships between body size and metabolic rate. They use a variety of different methods to measure metabolic rate, including measuring oxygen consumption, heat production, and carbon dioxide production. In one experiment, scientists measured the metabolic rate of alligators of different sizes. They found that the metabolic rate of alligators is proportional to their body mass raised to the 3/4 power.

Scientists also have conducted experiments on the growth of alligators. They have found that the growth rate of alligators is proportional to their body mass raised to the 3/4 power. This means that the growth rate of alligators is proportional to their body mass raised to the 3/4 power. They have also found that the growth rate of alligators is proportional to their body mass raised to the 3/4 power.
