Functional Safety for Road Vehicles Hans-Leo Ross, 2016-07-25 This book highlights the current challenges for engineers involved in product development and the associated changes in procedure they make necessary. Methods for systematically analyzing the requirements for safety and security mechanisms are described using examples of how they are implemented in software and hardware and how their effectiveness can be demonstrated in terms of functional and design safety are discussed. Given today's new E-mobility and automated driving approaches, new challenges are arising and further issues concerning Road Vehicle Safety and Road Traffic Safety have to be resolved. To address the growing complexity of vehicle functions as well as the increasing need to accommodate interdisciplinary project teams, previous development approaches now have to be reconsidered and system engineering approaches and proven management systems need to be supplemented or wholly redefined. The book presents a continuous system development process starting with the basic requirements of quality management and continuing until the release of a vehicle and its components for road use. Attention is paid to the necessary definition of the respective development item, the threat, hazard, and risk analysis, safety concepts, and their relation to architecture development, while the book also addresses the aspects of product realization in mechanics, electronics, and software as well as for subsequent testing, verification, integration, and validation phases. In November 2011, requirements for the Functional Safety FuSa of road vehicles were first published in ISO 26262. The processes and methods described here are intended to show developers how vehicle systems can be implemented according to ISO 26262 so that their compliance with the relevant standards can be demonstrated as part of a safety case, including audits, reviews, and assessments.

Training in the Motor Vehicle Repair and Sales Sector in Germany Rainer Lichte, European Centre for the Development of Vocational Training, 1994 Training in the motor vehicle repair and sales sector in Germany was examined in a study that included the following approaches review of the sector's structure characteristics institutional and social context employment practices trends changes in the type of work and employment training requirements and available initial and continuing vocational education and training in depth case studies of five auto repair shops and dealerships and identification of economic employment and training trends It was discovered that although the motor industry remains the most important industry in Germany s economy it will not likely experience any more growth Vehicle sales are declining however the volume of repairs is likely to increase as cars become older Higher qualifications are being demanded of repair shop employees because of new environmental safety standards and technological advances Only about 7% of the sector s employees have no relevant vocational qualification and one in every five employees is engaged in vocational training Nearly all employees in aftersales departments and repair shops participate regularly in in house continuing training and or courses provided by manufacturers importers suppliers or chambers of trades however many people in positions of responsibility within the sector still do not consider the available training activities sufficient Contains 63 tables figures and 33 references MN
