DOODLE NOTES

Evolution by natural selection

Describe the theory of natural selection and how this theory was first conceived (thought of).

An English naturalist named Charles Darwin went on a voyage around the world. He noticed that animals in similar environments had similar characteristics. For example, in the Galápagos Islands, Darwin observed similar but non-identical species of finches on each island. He noticed that their beaks seemed to be adapted to their food source. After some time thinking and the work of other scientists, Darwin developed his theory of natural selection. Darwin's theory states that organisms with favorable traits will survive and reproduce, passing on those traits to their offspring. Over time, these traits become more common in the population, leading to the evolution of new species.

GENETIC

Evolution

natural selection changes the range of traits in a population - there are 3 ways it can change. Let's look at a moth population that shows

GENE FLOW

What is it?

movement of genes in or out of a population. It can happen through movement of individuals or through the movement of gametes. For example, the movement of pollen or sperm. This can bring different alleles into a population, changing the frequency of existing alleles.
