forcefully that tourism both induces migration and displacement and is enabled by them in a self reinforcing circular flow. These population movements she argues likewise are both a cause and effect of economic growth. They are not however a panacea for developing countries. Throughout her study Bookman underscores the human costs of tourism led development emphasizing the need for greater attention to the social dislocations that it brings about. The relevance of the issue to escape the primary commodity trap and to diversify into new products and markets is without doubt one of the major challenges for African countries. In the era of globalisation and increasing international competition it has however become much more difficult for African countries to diversify into new products and processes and to enter new niche markets successfully. This Volume XI of the Yearbook discusses the state of primary commodity dependence of African countries by analytical surveys based on examples of countries, sectors and products. Options for horizontal and vertical diversification are analysed by detailed case studies and supply and demand side constraints for suc. Rajshahi University Journal of Social Science and Business Studies, 2007. Infrastructure and Economic Development in India Braj Mohan Joshi, 1990.
