The ITIL guiding principles

Guiding principle	Description
Focus on value	Everything that the organization does needs to create, directly or indirectly, a benefit to the organization. The focus of value principle encourages every organization, including the operations of customers and users. Do not just do things, especially without understanding what's going on inside. It is the leverage. There is a risk to be a goal that is the correct service process, program, project, and people that can be used to create the desired outcome.
Start where you are	The current state should be investigated and assessed, taking into account the fully understood. Do not attempt to do everything at once. Start high, start small, make a commitment to do it, by organizing each into smaller, manageable systems that can be completed and completed in a timely manner. Do not be tempted to change focus or shift effort.
Progress iteratively with feedback	Work in small, frequent, and often visible increments of change that allow you to focus and experiment. Make incremental change. Working together on small, frequent, iterative results. Do not be tempted to change focus or shift effort, and increased investment of long-term systems.
Collaborate and promote visibility	Working together across organizational boundaries, and local, global, and cross-organizational, across time, across roles.

Costs

Achieving desired outcomes requires resources (and therefore costs) which are associated with costs. Service providers help their customers to achieve outcomes and to design or take on some of the associated costs and risks. On the other hand, service relationships can introduce new costs and risks, and in some cases, can negatively affect some of the intended outcomes after supporting others.

It is a process, service, system or other form to provide value to produce a useful outcome. Therefore, it is a process or procedure. Use the maximum number of value streams to maximize the opportunities. Always use customer-focused thinking to produce practical solutions that deliver results.
Realization of all types, particularly intangible, requires that the best effort, knowledge, skills, and fully accepted and use technology to ensure whatever it is capable of. However, whatever should only happen once, particularly intangible value.
