The Life of Charles Dickens: 1812-1842 John Forster,1874

The Life of Charles Dickens by John Forster ,1874 The uncommercial traveler. Hard times. The mystery of Edwin Drood.Twist.v Bidlo, et al Charles Dickens,1876 Hard Times Charles Dickens,2013-02-22 Hard Times is the tenth novel by Charles Dickens The book appraises English society and is aimed at highlighting the social and economic pressures of the times Hard Times is unusual in several respects It is by far the shortest of Dickens novels barely a quarter of the length of those written before and after it The Utilitarians were one of the targets of this novel Utilitarianism was a prevalent school of thought during this period its founders being Jeremy Bentham and James Mill father to political theorist John Stuart Mill Theoretical Utilitarian ethics hold that promotion of general social welfare is the ultimate goal for the individual and society in general the greatest amount of happiness for the greatest number of people Dickens believed that in practical terms the pursuit of a totally rationalized society could lead to great misery Dickens was appalled by what was in his interpretation a selfish philosophy of materialist laissez faire capitalism including exploitation of children 1847-1870 John Forster,1900

The Teacher's Journal ,1902 Tradefull Merchants John McVeagh,2025-11-21 Tradefull Merchants 1981 surveys the range of English literature from the sixteenth to the twentieth centuries and explores the successive new lights in which the commercial character has been depicted in poetry drama and fiction and thus in society at large As capitalism began to develop into the dominant organisation of social life during and after the sixteenth century in England literature reflected and commented on the profound change in society s attitudes to trade and trading men Through this survey of literature s attitudes to capitalism the author highlights the close relationship between imaginative writing and the material and social life of the country
