Criminal Justice Theory Edward R. Maguire, David E. Duffee, 2008-03-25 Criminal Justice Theory is the first comprehensive volume on the theoretical foundations of criminal justice. The authors argue that theory in criminal justice is currently underdeveloped and inconsistently applied, especially in comparison to the role of theory in the study of crime itself. In the diverse range of essays included here, the authors and contributors integrate examples from the study of criminal justice systems, judicial decision making, courtroom communities and correctional systems, building the argument that students of criminal justice must not evaluate their discipline solely on the basis of the effectiveness of specific measures in reducing the crime rate. Rather, if they hope to improve the system, they must acquire a systematic knowledge of the causes

behind the structures policies and practices of criminal justice HC 428 - Security on the Railway Great Britain: Parliament: House of Commons: Transport Committee,2014-09-05 Crime on Britain s railways decreased year on year over the past decade That trend shows the effectiveness of the specialist rail policing provided by the British Transport Police BTP The Committee were impressed by the BTP s commitment to tackling crime while minimising delays for the travelling public Despite the welcome decline in overall crime we identified areas where the BTP could improve its performance The British Transport Police Authority BTPA is the body with responsibility for setting the BTP challenging but achievable targets to tackle crime on the railway The BTPA must fulfil its remit and avoid any perception that it is too close to the people whom it should be holding to account The Committee concluded that the BTP model of developing specialist policing skills and securing funding from transport providers might usefully be applied to other transport modes such as aviation Such an approach could minimise delays maximise security and reduce the cost of policing to taxpayers In the course of the inquiry the Committee heard that vulnerable children and young people are often found in and around railway stations and were surprised to learn that the BTP currently has no targets in relation to child protection The Department for Transport the BTPA the BTP and the charity sector should work together to tackle this emerging issue by examining the available data and reviewing current practice International Journal of Comparative and Applied Criminal Justice ,2002 Applied
