

AP Biology - Chapter 3 Cellular Respiration Assignment

- What is the relationship between anaerobic and aerobic biology?
 Anaerobic means "without oxygen" and aerobic means "with oxygen". Anaerobic organisms can survive without oxygen, while aerobic organisms require oxygen to survive. Anaerobic organisms are found in environments where oxygen is not present, such as deep-sea hydrothermal vents and the digestive tracts of animals. Aerobic organisms are found in environments where oxygen is present, such as the surface of the Earth and the atmosphere.
- What does an electron transport chain and what is the difference between a lowering and maximum electron potential?
 An electron transport chain is a series of protein complexes in the inner mitochondrial membrane that transfer electrons from one molecule to another, creating a proton gradient across the membrane. The difference between a lowering and maximum electron potential is the difference in the energy levels of the electrons before and after they pass through the electron transport chain.
- Describe the process and purpose of cell respiration.
 Cell respiration is the process by which cells convert glucose and oxygen into carbon dioxide and water, releasing energy in the form of ATP. The purpose of cell respiration is to provide the energy needed for the cell to carry out its various functions.
- Explain the structure and function of mitochondria.

- What is the purpose of the electron transport chain and how does it relate to the mitochondria?
 The electron transport chain is a series of protein complexes in the inner mitochondrial membrane that transfer electrons from one molecule to another, creating a proton gradient across the membrane. This gradient is used to drive the synthesis of ATP. The electron transport chain is located in the inner mitochondrial membrane.
