

BASIC GASKET APPLICATION GUIDE & MATERIAL SELECTION

Application / Function

Dynamic gaskets are generally used to seal and support the sliding, the rotation of the ends of a shaft to allow relative movement. These consist of two gaskets which distribute axial forces in a gasket with an application on all three axial levels. Dynamic seals are used to increase life span. A gasket is used to maintain the pressure in a system or to allow fluid to flow in a system throughout the life span application. The gasket compresses the two components between the mating surfaces of the system. This is done by creating a radial force on the system. The gasket is used to seal the system between the mating surfaces. If the gasket is used to seal a system, the gasket is used to seal the system through the life of the application that would be used for a gasket.

In order to determine the application requirements, the gasket designer is required to determine the gasket requirements in order to seal. Every gasket application is unique and every application requires that the gasket be selected to seal the application. The requirements of each application is not constant in the application.
