Abstract. Space research in India started in 1963 when a two-stage rocket was launched from Thumba on 23 November 1963. On the solid propellant wing of the Thumba Rocket, the engagement of the Indian space programme, PSLV, solid rockets became the crucial element of which PSLV derivatively came through its technology transfer on its launching of several M B C rockets and growth of several other classes. Major breakthrough in many systems came into place during this period. High energy composite solid propellants were developed, characterised and processed at the Thumba Rocket Space Centre and at the Vikram Sarabhai Centre. Events that include such as test cell, Padup and other test cells propellant area also developed in order to suit the indigenous programme. The Satellite Launch Vehicle (SLV-3) conceived at the early period, was fitted with four stage motor filled with solid propellant made in native test process. These facilities, including critical process equipment, have come up as a result of ISRO's indigenous efforts. The Solid Rocket Motor (SRM) facilities further equipped to produce large propellant grains to meet the needs of the Polar Satellite Launch Vehicle (PSLV).

Keywords: Solid propellant; composite propellant; rocket motor; propellant motor.

India took her first step into the space age in 1963, when the Government of India initiated the study of the subject of space research and practical applications of space space in the Department of Atomic Energy (DAE). Not long after, that being the Indian National Committee on Space Research (INCOSPAR) to organise the space programme. On 23 November 1963 a three stage PSLV rocket was successfully launched from Thumba and the Thumba Experimental Rocket Launching Station (TERLS) became operational, thereby heralding the dawn of the Indian Space Programme. The Indian Space Research Organisation (ISRO) came into being in 1969. In 1972 the Government of India set up the Space Commission and joined the Department of Space with other under the purview.
