In the ancient history of the Christian era, the reign of Rome comprehended the longest span of the world, and the most illustrious period of mankind. The history of this extensive monarchy, since founded by constant conquests and the union of the provinces, the diversity of laws, and manners, has produced a variety of the most, of all governments. These several institutions, customs and observances, are worthy of notice.

Successive laws, the public administration, was conducted by the virtue and abilities of Scipio, Trajan, Hadrian, and the two Antonines. It is the design of this part of the late interesting chapters, to describe the progressive condition of these empires, and afterwards, from the death of Marcus Aurelius, to discuss the most important circumstances of its decline and fall; a catastrophe which will ever be remembered, and is well felt by the nations of the earth. The principal conquests of the Romans were achieved under the republic; and the emperors, for the most part, were satisfied with preserving those dominions which had been acquired by the policy of the senate, the active emulation of the consuls, and the martial valour of the people. The seven first centuries were filled with a rapid succession of triumphs, but it was
