Exploring Human Genetics

For this lab, you will be working with a set of data from a genetic cross. The data is presented in a table below. You will be asked to analyze the data and determine the genotypes and phenotypes of the parents and offspring.

Background:

The trait being studied is the presence of a widow's peak (W) versus a straight hairline (w). This trait is controlled by a single gene with two alleles. The allele for a widow's peak (W) is dominant over the allele for a straight hairline (w).

Procedure:

1. Read the data table carefully.

2. Determine the genotypes of the parents.

3. Determine the genotypes of the offspring.

4. Calculate the expected phenotypic ratio.

5. Calculate the chi square value.

6. Determine if the results are significant.

Data Table:

Summary:

The data shows that all offspring have a widow's peak (W) and a straight hairline (w). This indicates that the parents are heterozygous (Ww) for the trait.

Conclusion:

The results of the genetic cross are consistent with the expected Mendelian inheritance pattern for a dominant-recessive trait. The chi square analysis shows that the observed results are not significantly different from the expected results.
