Using Dictionaries B.T. Sue Atkins,2015-02-06 This volume draws together highly detailed studies of how dictionaries are used by different types of users from school students to senior professors working with a foreign language with the help of different types of dictionaries from monolingual dictionaries for native speakers of the foreign language through bilingual dictionaries to monolingual dictionaries in the language of the user The tasks being carried out include L2 L1 translation L1 L2 translation L2 comprehension self expression in L2 and various project specific linguistic exercises The authors have tried to include enough detail to allow readers to replicate the tests and adapt them to serve their own interests Translation

Competence and Language Contrast - A Multi-Method Study Iryna Kloster,2021-10-07 Experience in translation does not always correlate with the quality of the target text Also the evaluations of translation work vary considerably among evaluators Why not shifting the focus of attention from the final translation to the underlying translation process when assessing translation competence Iryna Kloster applies a multi method approach to model the translation competence based on empirical parameters such as gaze behavior dictionary use revisions as well as subjective evaluations of comprehension and translation difficulty Eye tracking keystroke logging screen recording and retrospective interviews were applied to collect data in the experimental groups consisting of novice and semi professional translators As a consequence the author suggests using language contrasts for researching translation competence She draws conclusions based on hypotheses testing provides justification by triangulating quantitative and qualitative data and discusses the results in the light of empirical translation studies as well Training Foreign Language Teachers British Council,Goethe Institut,Association des universités partiellement ou entièrement de langue française,1987 The Use and Abuse of EFL Dictionaries Hilary Nesi,2012-02-14 The book begins with a review of research into dictionary use A number of experimental design problems are discussed in particular the unreliability of questionnaire responses and the need for detailed accounts of individual dictionary consultations whilst sampling in numbers sufficient to represent specified populations The experiments reported in subsequent chapters investigate issues raised in the review The first two studies find that dictionary use during a reading comprehension test affected completion speed but not test scores The apparent failure of dictionary use to improve comprehension is attributed to the test itself the dictionaries and the users choice of look up words The ability of users to interpret dictionary entries is investigated in three further studies which use computers to gather data on large numbers of individual consultations The findings indicate that there is little difference between three major EFL dictionaries in terms of speed of consultation and overall productive success They also indicate that Malaysian ESL subjects who have higher vocabulary scores are slower in their reading and less successful in their interpretation of entries than Portuguese EFL subjects Finally the findings suggest that overall productive success is unaffected by the presence or absence of examples The experimental findings lead to the conclusion that dictionary consultation is a process in which users match pre existing beliefs about word meaning and behaviour against segments in the dictionary entry Such segments are often selected because they are familiar sounding and conceptually accessible but may contain only incomplete or non essential information Where pre existing beliefs and dictionary information conflict dictionary information is sometimes overridden Thus word knowledge acquired from a single consultation is often insufficient to ensure productive success Although it is probably inevitable that word knowledge will be acquired slowly through multiple encounters modifications to the dictionary entry and the training of users might help to avoid serious misinterpretation of dictionary information
