Abstract:

This paper examines the benefits from and consequences of face- to- face contact (F2F). Benefits are derived from the efficiency of F2F as a mode of communication: from its use to overcome incentive problems in working partnerships: and from its role in socializing individuals in professional networks. The consequences are that agglomeration forces remain strong, even in world where the spatial costs of information transmission are low.

Keywords: Agglomeration, face-to-face contact, urban economics

Buzz Face To Face Contact And The Urban Economy:

Buzz, 2003 This paper argues that existing models of urban concentrations are incomplete unless grounded in the most fundamental aspect of proximity face to face contact Face to face contact has four main features it is an efficient communication technology it can help solve incentive problems it can facilitate socialization and learning and it provides psychological motivation We discuss each of these features in turn and develop formal economic models of two of them Face to face is particularly important in environments where information is imperfect rapidly changing and not easily codified key features of many creative activities London School of Economics web site

Institutions, Incentives and Communication in Economic Geography Michael Storper, 2004 The author presents a challenging perspective on two key issues within contemporary economic and geographical debate In his first lecture the author reconsiders some of the foundations of comparative economics and institutionalism in an analysis of the societal and communitarian bases of social and economic development Arguing that the interaction between society and community defines critical incentives for actors the author suggests a context sensitive sociological framework for the institutional analysis of economic development The second lecture focuses on urban economics and argues that existing models of urban concentrations are incomplete unless grounded in a more precise understanding of the most fundamental aspect of proximity face to face contact BACK COVER

Manufacturing in the New Urban Economy Willem van Winden, Leo van den Berg, Luis Carvalho, Erwin van Tuijl, 2010-10-04 In large cities in developed countries the share of manufacturing has declined drastically in the last decades and the share of service has grown as many manufacturing firms have closed or moved to lower cost locations The process of deindustrialization is often seen as part of the inevitable shift towards a knowledge based economy and urban economies come to rely on research and development financial services tourism and the creative industries This book looks at the changing link between manufacturing and knowledge based activities in urban regions The authors develop a new framework drawing on insights from organization studies and regional economic literature looking at various international case studies in Western and Eastern Europe South America and Asia

Clusters, Networks and Innovation Stefano Breschi, Franco Malerba, 2005-12-22 Examining the role of the much vaunted concepts of regional clusters in the prosperity and economic expansion of countries this work looks at the different experiences of industrial districts and high tech regions such as Silicon Valley Boston's biotech region and Hsinchu Taipei

Cultural Political Economy of Small Cities Anne Lorentzen, Bas van Heur, 2012-02-13 The volume highlights ongoing changes in the political economy of small cities in relation to the field of culture and leisure Culture and leisure are focal points both to local entrepreneurship and to planning by city governments which means that these developments are subject to market dynamics as well as to political discourse and action Public private partnerships as well as conflicts of interests characterise the field and a major issue related to the strategic development of culture and leisure is the balance between market and welfare This field is gaining importance in most cities today in planning production and consumption but to the extent that these changes have drawn academic attention it has focused on large metropolitan areas and on creative clusters and flagship high culture projects Smaller cities and their often substantively different cultural strategies have been largely ignored thus leading to a huge gap in our knowledge on contemporary urban change By bringing together a number of case studies as well as theoretical reflections on the cultural political economy of small cities this volume contributes to an emerging small cities research agenda and to the development of policy relevant expertise that is sensitive to place specific cultural dynamics In taking this approach the volume hopes to contribute to emerging research on culture and leisure economies by developing a differentiated spatial dimension to it without which sustainable urban strategies cannot be developed This book integrates perspectives of economic development with questions of governance and equity in relation to the fields of culture and leisure planning and development This book should be of interest to students and researchers of Urban Studies and Planning Regional Studies and Economics as well as Sociology and Geography
