In today's superhero-obsessed culture, it is surprising that no major superhero has appeared on the silver screen with mind control powers. Perhaps the reason is that social psychologists have determined that there are real methods we can use to influence others. If we understand the scientifically proven ways we influence humanity, we can attain an almost superhuman ability to control others. As a future teacher, I know that everyday I will utilize the knowledge I gained from Module 38. One psychological phenomenon I found particularly applicable was the chameleon effect, which occurs when we imitate the actions of others subconsciously (Myers, 2001). There are a few situations in which I believe I can take advantage of the chameleon affect. First, I will use the phenomenon to quiet students. When conducting a large group of students I will use call and response clapping or percussive vocalizations to quiet my classroom. Instead of yelling at students to be quiet, I will engage them in a mimicked activity, which will cause them to be quiet. I've seen many conductors use this strategy successfully. Another situation in which I will use the chameleon affect is to instill good posture in my singers. When conducting, I will stand with ideal singing posture, in the hope that my students will mimic me. Although I have not yet taken a formal conducting class, a notable conductor at my college often speaks about this phenomenon, which he calls "mimicry." Whether he is aware of it or not, the cause of this mimicry is most definitely the chameleon effect. Just like the mimicry seen with the participants in Tanya Chartrand's and John Bargh's study, hopefully my students will stand with feet shoulder width apart, with a loose neck, with a tall spine, and with an expanded chest if I do the same (Myers, 2001).
