Cards, Dice, and Male Bonding John S. W. Spinda, Daniel L. Wann, Michael Sollitto, 2012 In this case study analysis we explored the motives for playing Strat O Matic Baseball SOMB a baseball simulation played as a board game or online from the perspective of the uses and gratifications theory In phase I of the study SOMB manager narratives N 50 were analyzed for motive statements In phase II an online survey asked SOMB managers N 222 to respond to motive items as well as four measures of Major League Baseball MLB and SOMB identification Overall eight motives for playing SOMB emerged from the 64 item pool of motive items These eight motives were nostalgia knowledge acquisition social bonding enjoyment vicarious achievement game aesthetics convenience and escape Our findings suggest these motives predicted measures of MLB and SOMB identification in significantly different ways Theoretical implications future research limitations and discussion questions are presented in this analysis

Protecting Home Sherri Grasmuck, 2005-04-19 What can neighborhood baseball tell us about class and gender cultures urban change and the ways that communities value public space Through a close exploration of a boys baseball league in a gentrifying neighborhood of Philadelphia sociologist Sherri Grasmuck reveals the accommodations and tensions that characterize multicultural encounters in contemporary American public life Based on years of ethnographic observation and interviews with children parents and coaches Protecting Home offers an analysis of the factors that account for racial accommodation in a space that was previously known for racial conflict and exclusion Grasmuck argues that the institutional arrangements and social characteristics of children s baseball create a cooperative environment for the negotiation of social cultural and class differences Chapters explore coaching styles parental involvement institutional politics parent child relations and children s experiences Grasmuck identifies differences in the ways that the mostly white working class old timers and the racially diverse professional newcomers relate to the neighborhood These distinctions reflect a competing sense of cultural values related to individual responsibility toward public space group solidarity appropriate masculine identities and how best to promote children s interests a contrast between hierarchical communalism and child centered individualism Through an innovative combination of narrative approaches this book succeeds both in capturing the immediacy of boys interaction at the playing field and in contributing to sophisticated theoretical debates in urban studies the sociology of childhood and masculinity studies
