Evolution by natural selection

Describe the theory of natural selection and how the theory was first conceived (thought of).

An English naturalist named Charles Darwin went on a voyage around the world. He noticed that animals in similar environments had similar characteristics. For example, in the Galápagos islands, Darwin observed similar but non-identified species of finches on each island. He noticed that their beaks seemed to be adapted to their food source. After some time thinking and the work of other scientists, Darwin developed the theory of natural selection.

Charles Darwin proposed that organisms with favorable traits are more likely to survive and reproduce, passing on those traits to their offspring. Over time, these traits become more common in the population, leading to the evolution of new species.

An example of natural selection!

A population of light brown mice lived on an island of dark rock. They had a thin red hair tail.	Charles Darwin arrived. The mice started to have dark fur. The same variation.
Some mice had dark fur and were better camouflaged against the dark rock where they live.	The light brown mice were more likely to get eaten - they are the birds' favorite!
A higher proportion of dark mice survived to reproduce, passing on the beneficial trait.	Over time, the population has changed so that most of the mice have dark fur.
