The Four Dimensions Of Service Management

The ITIL guiding principles

Guiding principle	Description
Focus on value	Everything that the organization does needs to create, directly or indirectly, a benefit to the organization. The focus of value principle encompasses every perspective, including the experience of customers and users. Do not just focus on specific activities, but also on the overall context in which they are performed. There is a risk that a great idea in the current context becomes a program, project, and people that can't be used to create the desired outcome.
Start where you are	The current state should be investigated and assessed, taking into account what is already in use. Do not attempt to do everything at once. Start high, then iterate, making incremental changes. By organizing work into smaller, manageable pieces that can be completed and completed in a timely manner, you stand to receive a stronger focus on each effort.
Progress iteratively with feedback	Work in small, frequent, and often visible increments of work that allow you to focus and experiment, make improvements, change, and iterate together on the final outcome. Results that have greater impact, more resources to experiment, and increased feedback of long-term results.
Collaborate and promote visibility	Enhancing transparency, openness, information, understanding, and trust. Work and communication should be visible, clear, and

Achieving value: costs

Costs

Achieving desired outcomes requires resources (and therefore costs) and other associated with costs. Service providers help their customers to achieve outcomes and to design or take on some of the associated costs and risks. On the other hand, service relationships can introduce new costs and risks, and in some cases, can negatively affect some of the intended outcomes after supporting others.

Information and service management
Information technology, operational design, problem, service, and operations, which should be used to provide a desired value. If a process, service, or other activity is to provide value to produce a useful outcome, determine if a process is necessary. Use the minimum number of steps necessary to accomplish the requirements. Always use customer-focused thinking to produce practical solutions that deliver results.
Resources of all types, particularly staff, materials, facilities, and tools, which are used to produce value. They are essential and use resources to produce value. It is a matter of human, material, and other resources that only support and enhance value.
