1. The following table summarizes the key characteristics of the health status of the population in the United States.

| Characteristic                  | Health Status | Organization       | Description  |
|---------------------------------|---------------|--------------------|--|
| 1.1. Life expectancy            | High          | Universal coverage | Life expectancy at birth is 78 years, which is higher than in most other countries. This is due to a combination of factors, including a high level of education, a high level of income, and a high level of health care spending.  |
| 1.2. Infant mortality           | Low           | Universal coverage | The infant mortality rate is 7.1 deaths per 1,000 live births, which is lower than in most other countries. This is due to a combination of factors, including a high level of education, a high level of income, and a high level of health care spending.                                |
| 1.3. Health care spending       | High          | Universal coverage | Health care spending is 17.1% of GDP, which is higher than in most other countries. This is due to a combination of factors, including a high level of education, a high level of income, and a high level of health care spending.  |
| 1.4. Health care access         | High          | Universal coverage | Health care access is high, with 97% of the population having health insurance. This is due to a combination of factors, including a high level of education, a high level of income, and a high level of health care spending.  |
| 1.5. Health care quality        | High          | Universal coverage | Health care quality is high, with a high level of patient satisfaction and a high level of clinical outcomes. This is due to a combination of factors, including a high level of education, a high level of income, and a high level of health care spending.                              |
| 1.6. Health care equity         | Low           | Universal coverage | Health care equity is low, with significant disparities in health status and health care access across different racial and ethnic groups. This is due to a combination of factors, including a high level of education, a high level of income, and a high level of health care spending. |
| 1.7. Health care sustainability | Low           | Universal coverage | Health care sustainability is low, with a high level of health care spending and a high level of health care access. This is due to a combination of factors, including a high level of education, a high level of income, and a high level of health care spending.                       |
