Normative Decision Theory	Descriptive Decision Theory
Normative Decision Theory: How should we make a decision when there are multiple options available to us? Normative Decision Theory	Descriptive Decision Theory: How do we actually make a decision when there are multiple options available to us? Descriptive Decision Theory

Normative decision theory is concerned with how the rationality ideal is reflected in the process of decision-making by providing a model of how we should rationally make decisions.

How do these two (Normative) models differ?

1. Normative approaches describe good decision-making as maximizing expected utility.
  - attempting to maximize a binary property (good/bad)
2. Descriptive approaches describe decision-making as maximizing gains and reducing losses (loss aversion effect).
3. Normative approaches describe decisions as value judgments to be made by subjective value functions (different outcomes are not judged the same as their objective values, instead decisions are judged according to their subjective value).
4. Descriptive approaches describe decisions as value judgments and value functions are prospect (a reward / loss) value functions (value functions).

→ comparing normative decision-making (maximizing utility) with descriptive approaches (→)

Example 1: Offer would of the utility function, prospect theory.

Example 2: Prospect theory (value functions) applied to reference-dependent.

→ Normative (Utility) Functions

- Utility functions are used to describe the value of outcomes (and losses) based on a person's utility (well-being) and the probability of the outcomes. It is a function that maps outcomes to their utility values. The utility values are subjective values that are not the same as the objective values (e.g., money).

1. The utility of the outcome is subjective (depends on the person's utility function).
2. The utility of the outcome is subjective (depends on the person's utility function).
