Computer control of flexible manufacturing systems S. Joshi, J.S. Smith, 2012-12-06 With the approach of the 21st century and the current trends in manufacturing the role of computer controlled flexible manufacturing an integral part in the success of manufacturing enterprises will take Manufacturing environments are changing to small batch with batch sizes diminishing to a quantity of one larger product variety production on demand with low lead times with the ability to be agile This is in stark contrast to conventional manufacturing which has relied on economies of scale and where change is viewed as a disruption and is therefore detrimental to production Computer integrated manufacturing CIM and flexible manufacturing practices are a key component in the transition from conventional manufacturing to the new manufacturing environment While the use of computers in manufacturing from controlling individual machines NC Robots AGVs etc to controlling flexible manufacturing systems FMS has advanced the flexibility of manufacturing environments it is still far from reaching its full potential in the environment of the future Great strides have been made in individual technologies and control of FMS has been the subject of considerable research but computerized shop floor control is not nearly as flexible or integrated as hyped in industrial and academic literature In fact the integrated systems have lagged far behind what could be achieved with existing technology

Pattern Languages of Program Design James O. Coplien, Douglas C. Schmidt, 1995 The first conference on Pattern Languages of Program Design PLoP was a watershed event that gave a public voice to the software design pattern movement Seventy software professionals from around the world worked together to capture and refine software experience that exemplifies the elusive quality called good design This volume is the result of that work a broad compendium of this new genre of software literature Patterns are a literary form that take inspiration from literate programming from a design movement of the same name in contemporary architecture and from the practices common to the ageless literature of any culture The goal of pattern literature is to help programmers resolve the common difficult problems encountered in design and programming Spanning disciplines as broad as client server programming distributed processing organizational design software reuse and human interface design this volume encodes design expertise that too often remains locked in the minds of expert architects. By capturing these expert practices as problem solution pairs supported with a discussion of the forces that shape alternative solution choices and rationales that clarify the architect's intents, these patterns convey the essence of great software designs. 0201607344B04062001

Flexible Manufacturing Piet T. Bolwijn, 1986 Changing market demands, the increased pace of technological developments, and fiercer competition all make it increasingly necessary for production organizations to meet the requirements not only of efficiency but of flexibility and quality. This book, now also available in paperback, shows how an organization can meet these demands. It integrates technological innovation and social innovation, business, economic, and socio-technical aspects, as well as theory and practice. The book is the result of a long period of cooperation between the members of a group from different backgrounds and positions who are all engaged in the process of adapting Philips manufacturing systems to the challenges of the eighties and nineties. It discusses the complexity of modern production systems, showing the interrelations between market demands, socio-organizational criteria, and technological possibilities. It takes the form of separate studies, each analysing existing production organizations to ensure the necessary link up between theory and practice.
